

AOS Orwell shall operate an Occupational Health, Safety & Environmental (OHSE) Management System as a demonstration of its commitment to proactively safeguard the health and safety of all employees and third-party staff in the workplace.

This commitment shall include (but not limited to):

- Provision of safe and healthy working conditions for the prevention of work-related injury and ill health which shall be appropriate to the purpose, size and context of AOS Orwell.
- This policy shall serve as a framework for the establishment of core OHSE objectives which are communicated, understood and implemented at all levels, with due consideration to the applicable OHSE standards, codes of practice, legal and other applicable requirements.
- Top management is committed to ensuring all legal, applicable OHSE standards, codes of practice and other applicable requirements are fulfilled.
- Establishment of processes for the elimination of OHSE hazards/aspects and reducing its associated risk and impacts across all processes within the organisation.
- Ensure workers participation and consultation platforms to foster OHSEMS processes and procedures which impact workers ability to function with respect to OHSEMS objectives.
- Line managers and supervisors have the responsibility to monitor and measure compliance to the system requirements, in order to achieve the set objectives and continually improve process performance.
- Top management in addition to providing adequate resources shall promote training and education programs to ensure continuous development of safety attitude and environmental impact awareness.
- This policy is communicated and made available to all employees, contractors and other interested parties. All are required to fulfil their OHSE obligations as an integral part of their responsibilities.
- Annual reviews shall be conducted to ensure continuing suitability and relevance of this policy to the management system.
